One Cause of Sleepleasness That Can Be Overcome.

Air. William Handschu of Forty-sixth street. Cotton Valley, Pittsburg. Pa., expresses himself as follows regarding the new remedy for that common and obstinate disease, pilus: "I take pleasure in stating that I was so afflicted with piles that for three months I got no regular sleep; I became completely prostrated, the doctors ald me no good; my brother told me of the new remedy for piles, the Pyramid Pile Cure, I purchased of my druggist three became house and they completely cured me. I am once more at work and but for this excellent remedy I would be on my lack. I take great piensure in writing this letter tecause so many people are sufferers from this trouble who like myself did not know where to look for a permanent, safe, reliable cure."

Experience with the Pyramid Pile Cure for the past three years has demonstrated to the medical profession as well as to thousands of sufferers from piles, that it is the safest and most effectual pile cure ever offered to the public, containing no opiates or poisons of any kind, painless and convenient to handle, and being sold by druggists at 80c and $1.00 per box, is within the reach of every sufferer.

Very often two or three boxes have made a complete cure of chromic cases that had not yielded to other remedies for years.

There is scarcely a disease more aggravating and obstinate to cure than the various forms of piles, and it is a common practice to use cintments, salves and similar preparations containing dangerous poisons to remove the trouble. The Pyramid has superseded all of these ineffectual remedies and no one suffering with any rectal trouble will make any mistake in giving the Pyramid a trial.

RANSOM POST IN GLEE OVER LEATHER MEDAL.

It Was Presented to Comrade Clark, Officer of the Day.

INSTALLATION FEATURE.

Members of Ransom Post, G. A. R., are still chuckling in giee over the presentation of a leather medal to Comrade M. M. Clark of Tuxedo, which was a feature of the recent installation ceremonies at post headquarters, Garrison avenue and Olive street. Mr. Clark's new Grand Army uniform, which he were that night for the first time, was the cause of all the fun.

That this form of "hazing" is one that appeals especially to the risibilities of the old veteran was well proven. Throughout the whole affair, the boyishness of these old Grand Army men, few of them less than 60 and many near fourscore years of age, was a striking feature. Mr. Clark is a past senior vice commander and a thoroughly loyal member of Ransom Post, but through an unfortunate circumstance, or rather combination of circumstances, was deprived of his uniform. Some two or three summers ago Mr. Clark's wife, finding that his old uniform had become slightly moth-eaten, and supposing that it would never more be donned by its owner, presented it forthwith to a tramp. History does not state what the tramp did with it, but since that time Comrade Clark had attended all post functions in civilian clothes.

Two weeks ago Past Department Commander A. G. Peterson, who is installing officer of the post, requested Mr. Clark to assist him in the coming installation exercises by acting as officer of the day. The ercises by acting as officer of the day. The honor was instantly accepted by Mr. Clark, who, feeling that he must rise to the emergency which confronted him, and desiring to make a good appearance while acting in his official capacity, ordered a new full-dress uniform. But he did not stop at this. His enthusiasm bubbled over frequently, and whenever he met a post comrade he could not refrain from indulging in a little boasting as to the "killing" he would make with his new suit. The idea of a leather medal was suggested to these comrades and a self-appointed committee of six went to work on the project.

Installation night came and with it Comrade Clark and his new uniform. One by one he escorted the new officers to their respective piaces and then seated himself facing his comrades. While he sat thus with a look of caim and immovable dignity. Doctor George Weyer opened the attack. After complimenting the old and new officers, Comrade Weyer passed to the real subject—Mr. Clark's uniform.

"Look at him," said Doctor Weyer. "He shines like a mine; the sheen of his buttons reflect upon his silvery-tinted locks like the glittering spears of the hosts of Sennacharlb or the white spray on the surf of the incoming tide."

With the progress of the speech a start-shines like a miss silvery-tinted locks like the glittering spears of the hosts of Senmacharb or the white spray on the surf of the incoming tide."

With the progress of the speech a startling transformation came over the comrade thus honored. The first few volleys served only to arouse his interest and curiosity. As the fire became hotter he modestly looked about for a less conspleuous seat. He began to perspire. Before he could recover from his surprise the Ransom Howiers were on their feet with a topical song composed expressly for the occasion. A verse of the song says:

We set the style-no doubt of that Rank Comrade knows where he is at. Who have no doubt but they see it. But he who takes the crowd by storm. Is Clark, in that new uniform.

When the song was finished, the Howiers sat down amid yells of applause from the Boys. The next instant Comrade Wayne G. Simmons had turned his batteries loose. From an oratorical standpoint, Mr. Simmons's remarks were eminently correct and very appropriate. Concluding, he said:

"Comrade Clark in the name and on behalf of Ransom Post. I have the honor to present to you the uniform worn by you on this occasion, and I now hand you the receipted bill therefor."

Being still at a loss to understand the drift of the speeches and songs, Comrade Clark accepted the receipted hill mechanically. Again the Howlers sang and 150 other howlers howled.

Comrade Clark again mopped his brow, but, with the true spirit of the Grand Army soldier, determined if needs be to die in the trenches. Comrade George A. Newcomb had been selected for the task of bringing things to a climar, and presented to Comrade Clark acain mopped his brow but, with the true spirit of the Grand Army soldier, determined if needs be to die in the trenches. Comrade George A. Newcomb had been selected for the task of bringing things to a climar, and presented to Comrade Clark now for the season of the word, that I have ever worn.

And then the boys drowned his voice with vociferous applause.

Another feature of the oc

"'Mr. Gladstone, I notice that everything about your place has crows on it.' I pointed toward the figure of one of the black birds on a gable of the castle.

"'Crows?' he queried, not seeing my motion.

"As I drove away from the place, after a few more words with him, I concluded that it would be well for me to draw a line or two to keep the ideas I had gotten in my memory, so I told the cabby to stop not far from the castle and began to sketch. It seems that the cabby looked at me through his peephole, for in a minute or so he called down:

'Yes, crows,' I repeated, pointing at the

HIS VISIT TO GLADSTONE

How Senator Spooner Failed to Fool His Baby-Stories of Dewey and Hanna.

New York, Jan. 19.—Homer Davenport, newspaper cartoonist, in a lecture before the Quill Club on cartoons and the subjects of them, contended that a cartoon was a photo-

"One story of the effect of a cartoon that is especially good," he said, "is about an experience I had with Benator Spooner of Wisconsin. The hair on the back of his head stood somewhat awry, as you know, and when I drew a cartoon of him I made his locks look more disarranged than they really were, of course.

"After the Senator saw the picture he told all his friends that it was not one of told all his friends that it was not one of him. He took pains to tell this to every one he saw, and so it came about that many of his acquaintances really believed that they had been mistaken in first thinking the drawing meant to depict him. When he had pretty well spread the report that there had been an error, he saw me.

"Well,' he said, 'I have fooled most of them, but there was one person that could

A Visit to Gladstone.

"I decided to go down to the old man's home and see him. Julian Raiph, whose advice I asked about the proposed visit, said Gladstone would not see those who had reason to see him, and that I might get an interview with him because there was no earthly reason for my doing so.

"After we had talked the matter over it was determined that I should go to Hawarden Castle and send in a letter of introduction, in which it would be said that I was from a little village in Oregon. The

"If I'd known you were going to bring away the Grand Old Man with you, I would have brought a two-seater."

The speaker told how he came to draw the cartoon, entitled "Lest We Forget." It represented Uncle Sam pointing his finger at Admiral Dewey, who stood on the bridge of a battleship in the midst of the smoke of a great battle.

"This had a different effect from some other sketches of the cartoon species," he said. "A New England preacher, who had forbidden the paper in which it was published to come into his house because of cartoons, changed his order and became a regular subscriber to the sheet. The Admiral sent for me and told me that he had received thousands of letters to the effect that the cartoon expressed the sentiments of the writers. A Washington dealer asked me for a lot of original drawings to sell. This one, although I placed a fancy price on it to keep it from going, was the first sold, John R. McLean buying it for Admiral Dewey."

Another story told by the artist was one about Senator Hanna. An old negro from Georgia, named Doctor Brown, came into the lobby of the Senate Chamber and met the Senator, whom he recognized at first sight. When Mr. Hanna asked how it was that he was recognized by a man who had never seen him. Doctor Brown answered that he had seen pictures. After being urged he confessed that these pictures warv cartoons. He acknowledged this with reluctance, and added by way of apology:
"Well. Mr. Senator, to tell you the truth they didn't look like you a little bit, but I knew you by 'em in a mniute."

Mr. Davenport closed his talk by telling, by request, how he came to be a cartoonist saying that his father had to force the choice of that profession, he himself wishing in his boybood to be a shoemaker and spending the greater part of his time in the shop of a man of that craft. about for the most part, by the financing of the Jersey Central and Pennsy vania coul deals, both operations of unusual magni-tude.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The House to-day passed the bill authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Mississippl at Gray's Point. The bill was passed by unanimous consent. Representative Vandiver did not object, inasmuch as he had secured similar action on his bill for the rival bridge at Cape Girardeau. Mr. Vandiver, however, compelled the Gray's Point Interests to consent that the Cape Girardeau bridge bill would not be apposed by them in the Senate. Senator Mason of Idinois had, in fact, promised that his committee would report it favorably, so far as he is concerned. Speaking of the matter this evening, Mr. Vandiver said: "The outcome of this contest now rests with the Senate Commerce Committee, of which Mr. Vest is a member. If he objects to a report of the Cape Girardea bill, probably that will end the matter."

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Judge W. S. Shirk of Sedaha is in the city to argue in the Supreme Court the case of George H. Scott against the receiver of the First National Bank of Sedalia. Scott brought action in the Federal Court for Western Missourt to recover an assessment levied by the Comptroller of the Currency on fifty shares of stock in the bank named. He claimed that he was not a stockholder, inasmuch as his shares did not represent a bona fide issue of stock. The case was decided adversely, and Scott appealed.

Judge Shirk states that more litigation resulted from the fellure of this bank than from any similar case, not fewer than 300 suits having been instituted by various parties.

The article will be interesting to the lay reader in a remarkable degree.

Several months ago the whole world was interested in the daring experiment planned to be made by two young English doctors. They were to spend the summer on the Roman Campanis, one of the world's malaria-ridden spots. They intended to experiment with their own lives, and prove whether the mosquito really conveyed malarial potson, or whether it was some quality of the air that caused this most prevalent of all fevers. Doctor Coler will talk about this exploit, and he will tell another story of the devotion of a young physician to science in trying upon his own person the effect of a mosquito's bite.

Young people who are graduating from regular schools or have decided to discontinue there and engage in business pursuits will find the advantages afforded by the Bryant & Stratton College worthy of examination. Those who wish to obtain employment should not fall to make use of the facilities possessed by this institution for thoroughly qualifying students and aiding them in securing positions. Business men are constantly applying at the college office for help, such openings largely outnumbering graduates who wish to get employment. Circulars may be had at the college, fifth floor of the Century building, corner Olive and Ninth streets.

"The cash expansion reflects rather cor-rectly the gains the banks have made in their dealings with the interior and the sub-treasury, and the item would have been higher had it not been for the exports of specie carifer in the week. The loan in-crease was $22,84,000, and was brought Surplus reserve, $7,25,000; increase, 14,-552,550.

The Pinancier says:

"The statement of the New York clearing-house banks for the week ended January 13 is the most remarkable, in several respects, ever issued. Not only were the fluotations in 10aus and deposits the heaviest on record, but the aggregate totals of these terms are also the highest known in the history of the New York banks.

"Significant as these figures are, however, of the great volume of business passing through the banks, the results as revealed in the standing of the institutions are even more worthy of note.

"In the face of an advance in net deposita, amounting to 135,415,00), which required an additional cash reserve of more than $1,000,000, the New York banks have been able to add 24,555,550 to their excess reserve, the gain in cash having been almost $14,000,000.

"The cash extransion reflects rather cordeais, both operations of unusual magnitude.

"The gains in the leading items are confined principally to half a dozen large banks. Owing to the fact that the cash expansion was not distributed among the banks in proportion to their increase in other items, the reserve percentages have undergone wide fluctuations, as compared with the usual changes.

"The statement, despite the record-breaking figures, really indicates continued easy money, if the accumulation of idle cash in the banks is taken as a criterion. The total specie and legals held by the clearing-house, now amount in round numbers to $251,726,009.

"It is not surprising that Europe turns to this accumulation as the representative of a store of national wealth upon which drafts may be made to meet emergencies. In passing, it may be said that the increase alone in the deposits of the New York banks inst week amounts to more than the aggregate deposits of all the banks, in quite a number of reserve cities throughout the United States."
